

A black and white photograph of a hand-drawn map on a piece of paper. The map features a grid system with various lines and labels. In the upper right corner, there is a label in Arabic script: "البلدة" (al-balda) above "القرية" (al-qariyah). Other labels include "النهر" (al-nahr) and "الجبل" (al-jabal). The map shows a network of roads, fields, and geographical features.

An aerial photograph of a rural landscape. A large, roughly rectangular agricultural field occupies the left side of the frame. A single, straight diagonal line, likely a road or path, cuts across the field from the bottom-left towards the top-right. The terrain beyond the field appears more rugged and less cultivated.

A faint, dark triangular shape centered on the page, possibly a watermark or a scanning artifact.

A faint, horizontal watermark or stamp is visible across the bottom portion of the page. It appears to contain some text and possibly a logo, though it is too faded to be legible.
